VON BUELOW TELLS REICHSTAG OF VENEZUELAN CASE.

Ininfluenced by Hostility of British Public to the Alliance-Indebted to Us for Acting as Intermediary-Socialists Not Allowed to Answer Katser.

Special Cable Despatch to TEB SUN. BERLIN, Jan. 20 .- There was a violent scene in the Reichstag this afternoon when the Socialist members attempted to raise debate over the Kaiser's defence of the

When Deputy Vollmar brought up the case and the Emperor's defence of the late gunmaker, President Ballestrem quickly arose and said in a curt fashion: "In no connection must the Krupp incident be mentioned here." Herr Vollmar protested against this decision and attempted to proceed with his speech, but the president in-terrupted him and said: "I abide by my decision."

This caused much disorder in the Chamher and protests were made from several Herr Ballestrem, however, would not yield, and added that what had happened before and after the death of Herr von Krupp must not be mentioned in the Chamber.

Herr Vollmar insisted, however, in recording for the benefit of the empire the fact that it was forbidden to discuss in the Reichstag speeches in which a party representing more than 2,000,000 voters had been publicly vilified. The empire, he declared, was drifting toward Cæsarism, and the national character was being unfavorably influenced by the liberty accorded the Emperor to attack persons and parties, who were prevented by the le-e majeste laws from properly protecting

It may be remarked in connection with the attitude of Count von Ballestrom, president of the Reichstag, that he is an intimate friend of the Emperor, and it is supposed that his ruling was the outcome of a formal promise given to his Majesty.

Subsequently Herr Vollmar vehemently criticized the Government's foreign policy. He said it veered with every change of the wind, and that it aroused universal distrust by obtrusively courting each Power in turn. Chancellor von Bulow, replying to Herr Vollmar, referred to the Venezuelan affeir. He said that Germany's attitude which had been adopted with the full accord of Great Britain and Italy, had resulted in President Castro accepting the demands of the allies in principle. They were indebted to the United States for acting as an intermediary in the negotiations. The Chancellor added that the blockade would probably be raised as soon as the negotiations at Washington. which were actively proceeding, led to a satisfactory result. It would not be desirable to say more now, but as soon as the situation cleared he would make a

He said there was full accord between the three allies. He wished especially to emphasize the fact that the British and German Governments were proceeding with reciprocal loyalty, for which reason it was all the more remarkable that a por-tion of the British press had lately criticised German participation or non-participation in current political events, frequently without objectivity, and sometimes with evident ill will.

British press concerning Germany's not identifying herself with Great Britain's protest against the passage of the Dar-danelles by Russian torpedo boats, which, he said, was in accordance with Germany's good neighborly relations with Russia and her traditionally peaceful, impartial and neutral policy in Eastern affairs, the Chancellor proceeded to justify the cooperation of the allies in Venezuela. He

*Our common procedure against Vene zuela is a question of action limited before hand in scope and aim and exactly defined, by which satisfaction is to be obtained from an unwilling debtor for a perfectly dentical injury to the interests of the subects of Great Britain and Germany. Nevertheless the action of Great Britain by the side of Germany has called forth the resentment of several British newspapers and speakers, and a frenzied poet of greates talent has even risen to verbal abuse against

These symptoms are only to be ex plained by the embitterment of the British people by the violent attacks made by a large party of the Continental press on Great Britain during the South African war. Perhaps the German press did no champion the cause of the Boers with greater partiality than the press of other lands.

thancellor von Bülow declared that he rejoiced that he shaped German policy olely with regard to permanent German interests with his head and not with his heart. The result was that the relations between the monarchs and Cabinets of Germany and Great Britain were no influenced by popular passion. Germany continued to move along old ried, discreet and friendly lines, and he eped that public opinion on both sides would seen be regoverned by reason. e e were points like the Venezuelan motter, on which both nations were imreled by important interests to move in a care direction without running after each other or endangering other relationhips or the peace of the world.

GERMANY SENDS A CRUISER. Larger Warship to Replace Defeated Gun boat Panther at Maracalbo.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. BERLIN, Jan. 20 .- Officel news of the bombardment of Fort San Carlos at Maracaibo, Venezuela, by the German gunboat Panther has not yet been received or is withheld Nevertheless, it is announced that owing to the failure of the Panther to force the entrance to Lake Maracaibo the German cruiser Vineta has been ordered to proceed immediately to Maracaibo. Opinions differ as to whether this implies that the big cruiser is going to smash Fort San Carlos.

Officials believe that the whole affair has been grossly exaggerated. They are convinced that the German action was taken with the concurrence of the British and Italian commanders. The Panther. they believe, was chosen for the bombardment because she has the shallowest draught of any of the blockading vessels.

They contend that it would not be consistent with the duty or dignity of the allies to allow the blockade to be nullified by ignoring President Castro's opening of Puerto Villamisar and that nothing has been done contrary to the spirit or letter of the assurances given by the allies.

PLEASED OVER GERMAN DEFEAT. Paris Paper Pokes Fun at the Kaiser's Fine Navy.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. PARIS, Jan. 20.-The Frang nis figuratively chuckles over the reverse of the attack by the German gunboat Panther on Fort San Carlos near Maracaibo. It says that Germany's proud navy and superb sailors, after smashing defenceless ships, got inta place where they got more than they had bargained for. This incident has reduced to ridicule the Kaiser's desire to bow what a fine navy he has. The paper concludes by saying:

"If President Roosevelt succeeds in arranging the Venezuelan matters Germany and England ought to be grateful to him for saving them from a pretty pickle."

The Temps severely criticises the action of the Panther in firing on Fort San Carlos. It says it looks as though it were intended as an almost deliberate provocation to the Americans, who are acting as mediators in the present trouble. The Temps says it foresees an explosion of anger even on the part of Americans who are favorably disposed toward Great Britain, as they will gladly seize the occasion to point out the different procedure of the allies, and will join their own countrymen in denouncing the unlimited ambition of Germany's Kaiser, who is seeking at all cost in his desire for world-power to excite a formidable contest in the new world. The Temps believes that the present difficulty will seriously affect the English people who are already regretting the fatuous policy of the British Cabinet. The Temps concludes by asking if the Kaiser will recall the commander of the Panther as he did First Lieut Lengerke, who was called home to ex-plain the sinking of the Venezuelan warhips and committed suicide on the way.

WIRELESS TO FRISCO?

John Bottomley, general manager for the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, announced yesterday that work would soon be begun for the installation of wireless stations capable of covering pretty much all the world. "In view of the opposition," said Mr

Bottomley, "it is impossible for me to tell all our plans at the present time, but a number of stations will be set up here very soon, There is no reason that I know of why communication cannot be established beween here and San Francisco soon. It has been proved to our satisfaction that wireless messages can be sent over the land as well as over the sca.

"We are at present making arrangements o put a number of our stations at points along the Pacific. It is safe to say that New York will be adequately equipped,

"Mr. Marconi is coming to this city from Cape Cod some time this week. It is his intention to remain here only a very short time, as he wants to return to Cornwall to put more powerful apparatus in the Poldhu station as soon as he can. King Edward's message would have come by wireless had the Poldhu plant been more powerful."

The directors of the American Marconi company met at their Bridge street office yesterday and exchanged congratulatory elegrams with Marconi.

During the severe cross-examination which was continued for four days, he was surprised by being asked to identify a telegram he had received from P. A. O'Farrell, ress agent and private representative of F. A. Heinze, directly after the decision in the famous Minnie Healy case had been made. The telegram was sent from New York and read: "Congratulations on your decision in Healy. Heinze will take care of you. Continue good work

Harney admitted receiving the telegram, but said that he could not understand how it got into the possession of the Amalgamated attorneys. He declared that he had never received any assistance from Heinze and did not know what O'Farrell meant by saying Heinze would "Take care of you," or what was meant by the remark, "Continue the good work."

The examination of Harney was concluded this evening and the hearing was adjourned until to-morrow.

CARNEGIE TALKS OF HEROES.

NEITHER THEY NOR THEIR FAM-ILIES SHOULD WANT, HE SAYS.

Would Have Them Pensioned as Well as Give Them Gold Medals-He Presents a Medal to a 14-Year-Old Boy at a Y. M. C. A. Anniversary-Gage Speaks,

Andrew Carnegie and Lyman J. Gage. former Secretary of the Treasury, made addresses last night in Carnegie Hall at the celebration of the sixth anniversary of the West Side branch of the Young Men's Christian Association. Mr. Carnegie made a presentation speech, the occasion being the giving of a medal to Earl Gulick, a boy singer aged 14, for saving James Lawless, aged 30, from drowning at Greenport, L. I., last summer. Mr. Gage chose as his own topic, "The Exceptional Man."

Carnegie Hall was packed to the doors by the friends and members of the West Side branch. Nearly 5,000 persons were unable to get in the place at all. After singing by the New York Festival Chorus and the Glee Club of the West Side branch and a prayer by the Rev. Dr. Donald Sage Mackay, Mr. Carnegie presented the medal of the New York Volunteer Life Saving Corps to young Gulick, saying in part:

This is the heroic age, excelling all other in the number and service of its heroes. There is a hero in the Philippines to-day He was a wise Judge and strongly opposed our forcing ourselves upon the people there but at the call of duty he went to serve his country and benefit that people. The highest country and benefit that people. The home, save one, in the land was with reach, the height of his ambition at the resisted the temptation, immigrated office, save one, in the land was within his reach, the height of his ambition at home. He resisted the temptation, impaired as his health was. He elected to plunge into the waves, as it were, to save the drowning people who needed his help. Judge Taft is a true hero; he has risked his life for his fellows. A fireman hero in New York recently—I wish I could remember his name—rushed into danger through fire and smoke to rescue a child, and fell in the attempt. Such instances occur almost every week in one or other of our cities. Physicians almost daily sacrifice their lives in their noble calling.

Verily we live in a heroic age and it becomes us to celebrate, applaud and honor these grandest of heroes, who remind us by their acts that they feel "the fittest place where man can die is where he die s for man." There should be a national organization akin to the National Life Saving Society, or, perhaps, better still, that society should appeal for funds to support the families of such heroes and add a department to administer the fund properly.

The family of no hero who loses his life while trying to rescue a fellow man should ever suffer want, nor should the hero himself, if injured. He deserves a pension, with the thanks of the community, as well as a gold medal to be worn after ward and handed down to his family as a badge of true not flity. There is a worship which upility, a deference which

o his family as a badge of true not lity. s a worship which uplifts, a deference is a worship which uplifts, a deference which exalts, a tribute which raises all who give it, and this meeting will fail to justify itself if we assemble to do honor to a hero and are not ourselves, in contemplation of his act, raised in some degree to heroic level.

The great advance which all religious bodies are making and must continue to make or perish is along this road, the recognition of the truth that the kingdom of God is within man here and now, and that in order to merit heaven in the future or to be fit to exist there it is necessary that we begin to make something of the real heaven here now on earth.

William M. Kingslay, president of the William M. Kingsley, president of the West Side branch, announced the plans for the extension of the Y. M. C. A. work in Cuba and said that Gen. Leonard Wood would address the West Side branch on the subject either on Feb. 8 or Feb. 22. He then introduced Mr. Gage, who said in part:

then introduced Mr. Gage, who said in part:

The human family is one family and all members of it owe to each other sentiments of good will, sympathy and love. Every man should in equity receive from society value for value, according to the services he renders, but it is a fagt that the most valuable services, rendered by the superior and exceptional man, always have been and always will be underpaid. If human progress is to continue it must not be by the dull distribution of increment among us all, but by large rewards to those who achieve large results.

Mr. Gage said that as he understood it the Young Men's Christian Association strove to bring out the best in men and o bring o should be encouraged.

boats by the Government. This offer, Mr. Lessler said, had been made about a year ago, shortly after his election to the Fifty-seventh Congress, and was renewed at the beginning of the present session during the fight of the Holland Company to secure further Government contracts.

Mr. Lessler was asked by members of the committee to name the man who had offered the bribe, but refused.

On being pressed to give his name, Mr. Lessler finally said that the bribe had been offered through his clerk, that the man who offered the bribe was an ex-Congressman, but that he must refuse to mention his name.

The Naval Affairs Committee thereunos appointed a sub-committee of five members, of which Chairman Foss of the full committee is also chairman, to investigate the whole matter. Representatives of the Holland Boat Company who were seen to-night say that if the bribe was offered, as Representative Lessler asserts, it was not made with the authority of their company.

Representative Lessler was not at his hotel up to a late hour to-night, and could not be found to give his side of the case. It has been reported here at different times that last spring Superintendent of Elections McCullagh of New York came to Washington to see Representatie Lessler and asked him to vote for a bill providing for the purchase of a large number of Holland torpedo boats by the Government. According to the story, Supt. McCullagh told Mr. Lessler that many of the most influential people in his (Lessler's) district were interested in the Holland company and wanted to see the bill providing for the purchase of a considerable number of submarines go through. Mr. Lessler is said to have told Mr. McCullagh that he believed that the latter had done all he could with the election machinery at his command to secure his (Lessler's)
